4. This is an optional question which carries additional marks (golden questions). In this question, we are dealing with the InvoiceDate variable. The variable is read as a categorical when you read data from the file. Now we need to explicitly instruct R to interpret this as a Date variable. “POSIXlt” and “POSIXct” are two powerful object classes in R to deal with date and time. First let’s convert ‘InvoiceDate’ into a POSIXlt object: Temp=strptime(Online_Retail$InvoiceDate,format='%m/%d/%Y %H:%M',tz='GMT')

```
Temp=strptime(Online_Retail$InvoiceDate,format='%m/%d/%Y %H:%M', tz='GMT')
Online_Retail$New_Invoice_Date<- as.Date(Temp)
Online_Retail$New_Invoice_Date[20000]- Online_Retail$New_Invoice_Date[10]

Time difference of 8 days
```

```
Online_Retail$Invoice_Day_Week= weekdays(Online_Retail$New_Invoice_Date)
Online_Retail$Invoice_Day_Hour= as.numeric(format(Temp, '%H'))
Online_Retail$Invoice_Day_Month= as.numeric(format(Temp, '%H'))
```

- a) Show the percentage of transactions (by numbers) by days of the week (extra 2 marks)

9. On average, how often the costumers comeback to the website for their next shopping? (i.e. what is the average number of days between consecutive shopping)
Hint: 1. A close approximation is also acceptable and you may find diff() function useful.

```
Comeback<- select(TV, c(5,7))
```

10. In the retail sector, it is very important to understand the return rate of the goods purchased by customers. In this example, we can define this quantity, simply, as the ratio of the number of transactions cancelled (regardless of the transaction value) over the total number of transactions. With this definition, what is the return rate for the French customers? Consider the cancelled transactions as those where the 'Quantity' variable has a negative value.

```
ReturnRate<- TV%>%filter(Country=="France")
NegativeReturnRate<- filter(ReturnRate, Quantity<0)
nrow(NegativeReturnRate)/nrow(ReturnRate)*100
```

```
[1] 1.741264
```

11. What is the product that has generated the highest revenue for the retailer?
(i.e. item with the highest total sum of 'TransactionValue').

```
Revenue<- summarise(group_by(TV, Description), highvalue=sum(TransactionValue))
HighestRevenue <- as.data.frame(Revenue)
HighestRevenue[which.max(HighestRevenue$highvalue),]

Description highvalue
1140 DOTCOM POSTAGE  206245.5
```

12. How many unique customers are represented in the dataset? You can use unique() and length() functions.

```
length(unique(TV$CustomerID))
